Anjana Mishra Gang-Rape: This Is How Odisha Cops Cracked 22-YO Case

Bhubaneswar, Feb 22: Police Commissioner Sudhanshu Sarangi, who was the SP of Berhampur when the sensational gang-rape of Anjana Mishra occurred in 1999, is receiving applause from various quarters for reopening the case and finally nabbing the main accused after 22 years of the crime. The survivor has also expressed her gratitude to the CP and his team for ensuring justice to her. When asked about the idea to launch Operation Silent Viper, the CP said, "three months ago, I had met Dhirendra, one of the three accused, at Choudwar jail and later wondered about the main accused. After returning, I collected all old files of the case. I was shocked to see the brutality done to the woman." I felt bad to see that main accused Biban Biswal, who had waylaid the woman's vehicle and took the first turn to rape her at gunpoint, was not arrested. In its 2010 judgement, the Orissa High Court had maintained that the main accused was not arrested, he added. Another thing that I noticed that Biban was called 'BK' (Baranga King). As a Psychology student, it struck my mind that the one who used to be called as Baranga King must be keeping contact with his hometown. Later during investigation, we got to know that his sons were receiving money from an unknown source, which gave us a strong lead to launch a secret operation 'Silence Viper'. "Further, I came to know that his family was trying to obtain a death certificate of Biban. This made me believe that the person is still alive. I also heard that he had come and stayed in Trishulia area for some time. We got some wrong information too. My team worked hard during the last three months to find out his whereabouts."

Odisha's international sprinter Dutee Chand will skip Thursday's second leg of the oneday Indian Grand Prix Meet at Patiala's National Institute of Sports (NIS) campus due to strict quarantine rules for using the facilities at the NIS, her coach N. Ramesh on Monday. After winning the first leg held at the same venue on February 18, Dutee, 25, had planned to stay back at the NIS campus and compete in the second leg. But strict seven days quarantine rules to use the facilities at the NIS campus made her change the plan. "During the seven days quarantine, Dutee was told that she wouldn't be allowed to use the gym at the NIS. She was also told that she can't train with other sprint-use staying in Patiala," Ramesh told IANS. Ramesh said that because of the restrictions it wasn't practical for Dutee to stay at NIS and train hard. "Travelling to Odisha and then rushing back again to Patiala within a short span of time for the second leg wasn't good for recovery," he said. After participating in the first leg, Dutee went back home to her training base in Bhubaneswar. The 2018 Jakarta Asian Games silver medallist in 100m and 200m events, won the 100m dash in the opening leg with a time 11.51 seconds. Her personal best and national record is 11.22 seconds while this year's Olympic Games qualification time in the women's onds. "In the first leg she could have done better but there was a false start. It spoiled her tempo and she wasn't able to get into a good rhythm the second time," the coach said, explaining the reason for Dutee not clocking a good time. The focus, says the coach, is now to compete in the Federation Cup starting from March 15 in Patiala. "She would try to come close to the national record of 11.22 seconds," he said.

Students Need To Escape From Mental Stress: Prof. Mahapatra

(A.O. Bureau)

Bhubaneswar, Feb. 22: Seventeen-year-old Shanmugam Anitha, who topped the plus two examination under the Tamil Nadu State Board three years ago, committed suicide just because she could not get a seat in any medical college. Anitha had secured 1176 marks out of 1200 in the plus two exam and was a brilliant student, but ended her life because she thought that her dream would never be realized, eminent neurosurgeon and Vice-Chancellor of Siksha 'O' Anusandhan (SOA), Prof. Ashok Kumar Mahapatra said while interacting with students. 'Was it necessary for her to end her life just because she couldn't become a doctor?, he asked. The eagerness to give shape to one's ambition and the associated anxiety culminated in depression which led to suicide and more number of such cases were coming to the fore these days, Prof. Mahapatra said while delivering the first SOA Fortnightly Academic Lecture (SOFAL) which kicked off on Saturday. A person must understand that failure to secure a seat in a medical college was not the end of the world as there were many other avenues to channelize your talent and knowledge, he said adding young people should realize this as also their parents who pressurized them to achieve goals fixed by them. Speaking on the theme 'Healthy Lifestyle', the Vice-Chancellor said keeping in view the psychological state of young people who encountered tremendous stress to succeed in life, the central government launched the National Mental Health Program Prof. 2005. Mahapatra, who was the first Director of the AIIMS at Bhubaneswar, said it had been found that 48 per cent of students who succeeded in getting a MBBS seat at AIIMS were found to be depressed. "Notwithstanding their academic success, they suffered psychologically. It has got to do with their mental health," he said. "Most students don't have a balanced worksleep cycle as they keep awake till 2 am. They may be brilliant students, but no one told them to lead a disciplined life, Prof. Mahapatra said while pointing out that schools were least interested to monitor the mental health condition of children. "What most schools were interested centage of the Class 10 and Class 12 students passing out their exams," he said. "Success in life does not mean lot of money as it could not buy you health or happiness," Prof. Mahapatra said adding young students must have eight hours of sleep and should not over eat. Stating that a survey in Delhi had found that 15 per cent of school children under 15 years of age had began to smoke and drink, he said it was most important to realize that the parents were the real mentors of the child and they should not expect the schools to shape the lives of their children. There was a huge need to inject in young students the realisation that spiritualism mattered in life. "It was important for parents and teachers to know that spiritual incli-in was the success per-nation can help," he said while recommending Swami Chidananda's book titled 'Choice Is Yours' to all students. Dr. Kamal K. Kar, Assistant Program Advisor, NSS Directorate, Ministry of Sports and Youth Affairs, Government of India, also spoke on the topic 'Volunteerism: The call of the hour'. In a world where people wanted to get something without having to do anything, it was hard to come across persons who would volunteer to do something, Dr. Kar said adding the spirit of volunteerism needed to be inculcated in students. Dr. Jyoti Ranjan Das, SOA's Dean (Students' Welfare) was present while Dr. Nachiketa K. Sharma, Programme Coordinator, SOA NSS Bureau moderated the lectures.

'Atmanirbhar' mantra

D am Rajya as a concept is good but the na Lation wants to see positive changes on the ground. One can only imagine what 'Ram Rajya' would be like, a term that the BJP espouses and its leaders, including Prime Minister Narendra Modi, use quite regularly in their public addresses. But it's comparatively easier to understand Mahatma Gandhi's concept of 'Gram Swaraj', which Modi touched upon in his recent speech at the Visva-Bharati convocation. During the event, just ahead of the announcement of the Assembly election dates in the politically sensitive West Bengal, Modi mentioned Rabindranath Tagore several times but it would certainly be in bad taste to read politics into it as the Nobel laureate was the university's founder and the Prime Minister is the Chancellor. However, thankfully, unlike 'Ram Rajya' for which no time frame has been set, the Prime Minister seems to have a blueprint or a road map for realising the concept of 'Atmanirbhar' villages (self-reliant villages), somewhat akin to Gandhi's 'Gram Swaraj'. He called upon the students to frame a "vision document" with 25 major targets and work towards it in the next 25 years so that when the nation celebrates the centenary of its Independence in 2047, Visva-Bharati would have achieved these milestones. He suggested that the project should start by making the villages adopted by the university 'Atmanirbhar'. Further, the students should strive to make the village youth, artisans and farmers self-dependent by helping their products reach big markets across the world. However, with big corporate houses ruling the roost in world economy, it is easier said than done. Moreover, the reality is quite the opposite. Most of such projects launched by the IITs and other varsities see no light beyond the pilot trials which are mostly confined to few villages or pockets in adjoining areas. These are not expanded and, thus, fail to have a wider reach or impact. No doubt, engaging universities and educational institutes to empower the rural population and making it self-reliant is an excellent idea but it needs a coordinated, calibrated and comprehensive approach with knowledge and resource sharing among the institutes across India. Such institutes have the potential of becoming the torch-bearers of 'Atmanirbhar Bharat' but the foundation for it has not been laid yet, nor have any sincere attempts been made in this direction. That said, these plans should not accumulate dust in Government files or fall casualty to bureaucratic red tape, else these would meet the same fate as other similar plans. However, with the Centre providing `50,000 crore in Budget-2021 for research, we should have no reason to doubt what the Prime Minister says. His approach appears to be in the right direction. However, in a country where rhetoric often overshadows the reality, we can only hope that the Gandhian philosophy of 'Gram Swaraj' or Modi's 'Atmanirbhar' villages become a reality, not something like 'Ram Rajya' (which, according to Gandhiji, ensures equal rights to both, a prince and a pauper) with virtue, morality and justice at its core but nowhere in sight. Courtesy, vote bank politics! Moreover, the reality is quite the opposite. Go public rather than privatise

The PSUs which the Govt desires to privatise should be managerially toned up, which only industrial managers, and not bureaucrats, can do. In India, it is better to go public fundamentally because we do not have sufficient number of entrepreneurs with enough free wealth to pay for the public sector undertakings (PSUs). Many houses, although efficient, have already borrowed more than ideally desirable, which explains why the Government's privatisation push has so far been behind schedule. At this stage, a brief look at history would be useful. At Independence in 1947, India had many more traders than industrialists. Take the textile mills, of which India had a fairly large number. How many have survived? With most mills, the problem was with the weaving looms. They were outdated and needed to be changed. Alternatively, the mills could be trifurcated into one, carding/spinning, two weaving and three finishing/ packing. Instead, they carried on as long as possible and when they could not, the owners surrendered to closure. That the National Textile Corporation (NTC) inaugurated the expansion of what could be called the hospital sector of industry; it was really not public sector although the bureaucrats chose to mix up the two. When the NTC could not absorb more sick mills, they were allowed to wind up, sell their fixed assets including the land, pay the employee dues, and then compensate the shareholders. New hotels, office buildings or residential flats have come on the graves of the wound-up mills. Yet people continue to dress up well, better than earlier. Spinners, new weavers called power looms and finishers are functioning profitably in place of many of the expired mills. The little industrial tragedy is one reflection of the industrial limitations of some of our entrepreneurs. On the other hand, there were business houses which were functioning laudably well but their hands and legs were tied down by Nehruvian socialism, also vigorously practised by Indira Gandhi. Her plea was that the only way of co-existence for the rich and the poor was socialism. Apart from clamping down on business growth with the Monopolies Commission and other such laws, she nationalised 19 banks, the entire coal industry as well as general insurance. Little did she realise that the whole public sector represented State capitalism and not socialism at all. It would have socialism, provided the common people were given an opportunity to invest and obtain dividends. Even according to Karl Marx, socialism was "from each according to his ability, to each according to his opportunity". Thus Indian businessmen were denied the scope to grow and mature into industrialists. Those who did, managed to set up small and medium industries by even over-borrowing from the nationalised banks. Then Prime Minister PV Narasimha Rao did yeoman's service to the economy by liberalising the procedures and abolishing many a restriction. But in his temptation to get reelected for another five years, he went easy on his reforms in the second half of his term. If one looks at his years in supreme power, he did more for India politically than economically. Ayodhya was his biggest achievement and the first step in national revival in centuries. Keeping all Indian conditions in mind, the PSUs which the Government desires to privatise should be managerially toned up. Only industrial managers, and not bureaucrats, can do that. If they are structurally imbalanced, some of them may have to be merged with other suitable PSUs. The treatment of toning up would differ from unit to unit. The toned-up units should offer through one or more public issue of shares as per the SEBI and stock exchange rules. So long as the Indian State retains at least 40 per cent shares, let the public have shares. Many individuals have savings that they wish to invest but do not find suitable avenues. On debt instruments, the interest rates have fallen so low that they have been rendered unattractive. Let us clarify that most of our bureaucrats, IAS and others, are first-rate administrators but they are unlikely to be effective managers. The former are primarily wedded to rules and procedures whereas the latter's priorities are decisions, production and profits. The two cultures are quite distinct. Therefore, a PSU managing director should not be reporting to a bureaucrat but to his shareholders. The solution lies in the President of India parting with the shares of all PSUs to financial institutions like the LIC, GIC and its subsidiaries, banks, Unit Trust of India, and so on. When this happens, these new holders would behave like investors and not zamindars. Moreover, politicians would not any longer have ready access to recommend their candidates, use their guesthouses and cars, and so on. The PSUs would then operate like business and industries, not like jagirdaris. If for nothing else, for taking share investments in companies from the panelled offices of the upper classes to the masses, the late Dhirubhai Ambani needs to be honoured. The best way to do so is to have the public as partners in preference to banks. His logic was that loans cost interest, shares do not. Shares compel the management to perform and deliver lucrative dividends, which is what Indians expect of the PSUs. Karl Marx believed that religion is the opium of the masses. It can be that loans are the opium of the classes.

The Way To Become Good Book Of Others

Pratap Chandra Sahu Nabarangpur Mob: 9437788860

Normally most of the employees wish to become in good book of their bosses. It is also essential now-a-days and if they became success they prove themselves to be nearer and dearer to their bosses. It is nothing but an art. In normal cases. People want to be liked by others also. It is one of the human tendencies. The quickest way to be liked is to show that we like people. We do good for people Generally signs of appreciation, admiration, sympathy and interest are acceptable to almost every employee as well as to ordinary people. But yes Sir in each and every matter to the bosses is not acceptable. It is in apparently unimportant details of life that we can show a friendly interest in others. Here are some examples:

a. Seek occasions to compliment to others the majority of human beings feel rather insecure at least in prychologicall. Words of sensible praise help to give them back their confidence.

b. Show sympathy on occa-

So we do share our joy or sorrow among ourselves a little. But it should be impar-

c. Try to study the special tables of thers. It is worth to find out what people like best to eat wear and so on. When we give them a treatment or a present, we choose such a thing more carefully that will give them real pleasure and full satisfaction.

d. Notice the opinion of others. h. A little help is worth of great In general we should never affront somebody else's convictions except in the case of urgent important controversy.

e. It is most important not to ever forget to thank people. It creates interest in others. Thanks cost nothing but give much pleasure. It is a courlsey. f. Be businesslike and punctual whenever we are tale for an ap-

g. Note, what amuses other people Humour is the spice of life. But neither put peeper nor ginger in milk in a dish of liver. We must choose appropriate spice, what is funny to someone also can be an offensive to another one.

While noticing what amuses others by seeing what they tell express or show as funny and shit our humour to others.

deal of pity. So show thoughtfulness in small practical ways. We show we are always conscious about others. Others should known that we are aware of their need. "A friend in need is a friend indeed". In our simple way we try at our best to be kind and pleasant.

i. Notice what others do (Put) little question. So you notice pointment except in-avoidable what we consider them importalking is an important social are good listening also in an art. Some people are genuine borer. But more people bore us, because we fail to listen them properly. Most of the people are interesting if we make up our minds to be interested then it is ok.

k. We have to try at our best to like others and unself, which is most important and hard work also but there should not be a marathon race to reach others good book by lobby i.e. by hook or crook. We have to find out our own happiness in people which is however worth doing.

If you want to satisfy to your bosses. First perform your duty properly not showingly secondly they "feel good" with you really that you won't cheat them. You should perform everything unselfishly and without harassing others. There should not be pretenders.

It seems that some officers or superiors want some suggestions on accession from their subordinates. In that case, the subordinates should not take advantage and misguide by noticing the simplicity of the bosses.

Bigg Boss 14 winner Rubina Dilaik on her toughest moment: 'Inability | Mira Rajput reveals husband Shahid Kapoor's most to explain my situation to husband Abhinav suffocated me'

Mumbai, Feb 22: Bigg Boss 14 winner Rubina Dilaik opens up about people calling her win 'predictable', displaying her vulnerability and her equation with host Salman Khan. The Shakti actor beat Rahul Vaidya to take home the trophy. As Rubina Dilaik emerged as the winner of Bigg Boss 14 on Sunday night, she was coming off a rollercoaster journey in the last four and a half months. The popular television star has had a roller coaster journey on the show. While she never managed to win the hearts of her cocontestants, her loyal audience stayed true to her. The reality show also has given Rubina and husband Abhinav Shukla a second chance to work on their marriage. The couple had announced on the show that they were facing trouble in their marriage and have also contemplated divorce. The TV actor defeated Rahul Vaidya to take home the coveted trophy. Post her big win, Rubina, in an exclusive conversation with indianexpress.com, spoke about her Bigg Boss 14 journey, what led to her victory and Salman Khan's harsh words for her during the Weekend Ka Vaar. Excerpts from the conversation. More than four months in the house, and you have this trophy in your hand. How does it feel? It's been a long journey of 143 days, and it was worth every effort, struggle and failure that I faced in the house. In an initial episode, you mentioned how you wanted all the rules to be explained to you in a way one does for a four-year-old kid. When did you realise you could actually win? Honestly, there was always a desire to win but this game is all about destiny. Hence, I left it it to destiny but continued to create my journey. I really had no clue about the game but the learning spirit has always been ingrained in me. I wanted to live with that feeling, and continue to grow. I wasn't worried about losing or winning, I wanted to live and love my jourbattles with most contestants in the house. Which one affected you on a personal note? The one with Jasmin Bhasin and Rakhi Sawant. I have always been selective about people who enter my life. I am a person who gives every ounce to the ones I embrace. And when you do that, and your love and respect are not reciprocated, it shatters the confidence and faith in the relationship. These two people, events and incidences really hit me hard. However, I started my journey on the show with a clean slate, and I am exiting with a clean one again. Hence, I have no grudges. You spoke about issues in your marriage on national television, and even sought help when pushed mentally. Was it difficult to open up about your vulnerability? It was very tough because there is always a fear of rejection and being criticised and judged. The dejection part is something that always holds you back from not accepting your flaws and mistakes. The most beautiful learning in my ney. You've fought Bigg Boss journey has been to embrace all your strength. And if not have realised it but you overcome this, put it out on TV and able to inspire even one life, I think it's worth dealing with all challenges. So what was the most challenging experience for you in the show? There were a lot many but one in particular

was the time when I could not explain my situation to my husband Abhinav Shukla. Bringing your intimate relationship into the public arena and yet not being able to express yourself freely can really suffocate you. It was very tough for me, as I wanted him to understand but could not say it in words. Abhinav, in an interview to us, shared that the best thing for him on Bigg Boss was to have strengthened his bond with you. Now that you also have a winning trophy, which win looks more special. For me, my relationship is the most precious thing, and thus achieving it was more special. This (showing her trophy) I don't take it for granted but I have always believed that success is all about professional and personal life together. And now, towards the end of the journey, I can probably say that I have been able to achieve that. Suffering from a superiority complex, authoritative, manipulative and a hypocrite you have been called all these. Any clarification you want to give? These false accusations only strengthened my resolve to look forward and they were actually the ones who propelled me to do better. Their allegations became a stimulus for me to work towards reaching my destination. It also gave me strength to move ahead.

Salman Khan seemed to scold you every Weekend Ka Vaar. Did it effect your confidence somewhere? It did in the initial stages but then I started looking at it from a fresh perspective. I took each of his feedback as a way to improve my game and each criticism as a way to polish myself further. It was all a learning lesson for me.

Many called it a 'predictable win'. What or who do you think led to your victory? Only my fans. As I have always said, an artist's existence and identity are only because of the audience. I have this trophy in my hand because I have these million people who have immense faith and love in me. And this win is only because of them. 5 Yogasanas for Cervical Spondylosis

Cervical spondylosis is the term used to define degeneration of the spine, particularly the vertebral discs, ligaments, cartilage and bones of the neck. The popular term spondylitis, meanwhile, refers only to inflammation in the vertebrae. Spondylosis is an agerelated degenerative disease that occurs due to osteoarthritis, unnatural bone growth, repeated stress on the neck or spine due to lifestyle habits, injuries and genetic weakness. Several yoga exercises help reduce the severity of the symptoms and provide longterm benefits. Shared below are five such

since cobras are known to raise their hooded head when they see a threat to themselves. This exercise helps relax the stiffness and pain in the neck, shoulders and spinal column. 3. Salabhasana: This exercise is also known as the locust pose since the shape looks similar to that of the insect. The practitioner should lie on their stomach with the Ahmedabad, Feb 22: Veteran fast bowler James Anderson urged critics of the much-debated rotation policy to look at the "bigger picture", considering the amount massive cricket to be played by the England team in coming days. England did not play Jonny Bairstow and Mark Wood in the first two Tests but have brought them back for the final two Tests as a part of rotation policy while first-choice keeper Jos Buttler is back home after the opening Test to help players cope up with life inside the biobubble. "You have got to try and look at the bigger picture. The idea was if I missed son, 38, himself played series-opener where he took five wickets in England's victory but was rested for the second where India emerged triumphant by a massive 317-run margin. "I am feeling good and fresh and ready to go again if called upon. It's frustrating to an extent but I can see the bigger picture with the amount of cricket that we have got." To further his argument, Anderson cited injuries he had to endure in the last two years when he missed matches in the 2019 Ashes series and also could not play two Tests against South Africa. "It's the same for all bowlers, not just me. "We've got 17 Test matches this year and the best way of getting your best players firing for as many of those as possible is to take little rests every now and together," he said.

then. "It's not a case of shielding, it's just a case of trying to make sure you're not wearing someone out until they completely break in half." England have called back pacer Wood but Anderson definitely would not mind bowling in tandem with Stuart Broad. "That has definitely crossed my mind. Ideally, we would get into a position where there will be times - a crucial game potentially when they want the experience there of both of us and that might get called upon. "All we can do is when we get the nod do the best for the team, try and stay in as good shape as possible, stay as fit as possible and eventually whether it's in the summer or the back end of the year hopefully we will get the chance to play again

India vs England: Rohit Sharma defends spin-trap as home advantage

New Delhi, Feb 22: If the pitch for the Day-Night Test at Motera behaves on the same lines as the one for the second Chennai Test, it would neither surprise nor disappoint Rohit Sharma. The Indian opener, who hit a matchsetting 161 in the first innings on a rank-turner to help the team get back on terms in the series, sees nothing wrong in teams exploiting home advantage in terms of pitch and conditions. He argued that both teams have the opportunity to utilise the surface on offer. The pitch for the second Test aided spinners from the start, with the Indian trio of Ravichandran Ashwin, Axar Patel and Kuldeep Yadav much more adept at using it than their England counterparts, Jack Leach and Moeen Ali. It's a formula that is likely to be carried forward in the pink-ball Test, which usually is dominated by seam and swing bowlers. Rohit doesn't see anything wrong in it. "...The pitch is the same for both the teams, so I don't know why this topic is raised every time. Both the teams play on the same pitch. People say pitches shouldn't be like this or that but for years Indian pitches are made like this ence. "I don't think there needs to be any changes. Every team takes advantage of their home conditions." India's chances of qualifying for the World Test Championship (WTC) final in June depends on the outcome of the England series, and defeat in the first match has prompted the thinktank to throw the spin-punch at the visitors.

WWE Elimination Chamber Results: Miz | Axar — the family's hero, literally | Ashleigh Barty uncertain of schedule as

Ahmedabad, Feb 22: A small bungalow in the small town of Nadiad, some 60 kilometres from Ahmedabad, tells everything that needs to be told about Axar Patel. An ailing father whom he helped "defeat death", a mother who never wanted him to play cricket as she feared he would get hurt, and a joint family – Patel's story is best told by the inhabitants of this home. It's not hard to find Patel's residence 'Rajkiran'. One just needs to stop a passerby; they will show the road which snakes up to the home of the left-arm spinner, who starred on Test debut with a fivewicket haul in Chennai. In this quiet colony, Patel's SUV's is the only hint of affluence. As bigtime cricket returns to Ahmedabad, at the world's largest cricket stadium, it's only apt if two local lads - Patel and Jasprit Bumrah – feature in the Indian playing XI. Happier times now From Akshar to Axar, it has been a smooth ride for the 28year-old Gujarat allrounder. The namechange, as the story goes, was a typo from the school principal on a certificate. Akshar decided to remain Axar. The family is happy with their son making headlines around the globe. However, two years ago, they had to face harsher realities of life. Axar's father Rajeshbhai had gone for a midnight stroll for tea with friends when he met with an accident that damaged the left side of his skull. Sitting on his sofa, watching the highlight reel of his son's five-for, Rajeshbhai says he just defeated death. "I don't remember much, they

(his family) recalled the whole incident for me. Axar was in shock but in those tense moments, showed tremendous maturity. It was with his support that I managed to pull back," he says. Patel's cousin Sanship adds how Rajeshbhai's head was completely damaged and how it took four months for a miraculous recovery. There was a fear of coma and total memory loss. Patel did what any offspring would have done. He poured all his resources into his father's treatment and was ready to fly him abroad. Even in that tense situation, Patel didn't lose hope, the family says. His father doesn't talk much these days. When he is away from home, Patel calls every evening, enquiring about his father's health. "Luckily, there was no cricket happening when uncle met with the accident. One month later, Axar went to London to play cricket, and was constantly in touch with home. He just wanted his father to be back home," Sanship recalls. The family has overcome the trauma and is enjoying the present phase. They know that when Ravindra Jadeja returns to the Test side, Patel might have to make way. But they don't want this moment to end soon. The stump mikes at Chepauk revealed shouts of "Jayasuriya, left mey ja" from wicketkeeper Rishabh Pant. Patel's nickname dates back to his childhood days. Rajeshbhai, a cricketlover, had asked his only son, who was just 12 then, about his aspiration in life. "I gave him two options - cricket or

studies.

Naomi Usaka closes in on her top spot

New Delhi, Feb 22: Australian Ash Barty has provided no certainty if she will play regularly on the women's tour amid the COVID-19 pandemic despite Naomi Osaka closing in on her world number one ranking with a fourth Grand Slam title in Melbourne. Barty accepted a wildcard to defend her Adelaide International title this week after faced no fitness issues during the Melbourne Park swing despite returning to the circuit after 11 months. "We plan as best as we can," the 24-year-old told reporters in Adelaide on Monday. "Obviously in the current situation nothing's certain. It's difficult to plan, without a doubt, but we just go with the advice that we have been given. "Of course I making an exit at the quarter-final stage of her home Grand Slam with a defeat to Czech Karolina Muchova. The Queenslander skipped last year's U.S. Open and did not defend her 2019 French Open title, opting not to travel due to health concerns amid the pandemic. Barty, who is expected to head to the Middle East next month to play WTA events in Doha and Dubai, said she would love to be back on tour full-time, and all those decisions will come as close as we can to the events, but also as far out to try and plan a schedule and plan a tour." Barty did not play for 11 months but has still held on to her top spot as the women's governing body adjusted the WTA rankings due to the pandemic, allowing players the ability to skip tournaments without the fear of losing points.
